“No Crystal Stair”: Black Women’s Work in America

Dr. Francille Rusan Wilson

WHEN: Wednesday, February 8
WHERE: Student Center, Ballroom A
TIME: 7:00 PM

Organization of American Historians Distinguished Lecturer Dr. Francille Rusan Wilson is associate professor of African American studies at the University of Maryland, College Park. She is a labor and intellectual historian whose current research examines the intersections between black labor movements, black social scientists, and black women’s history during the Jim Crow era. Her forthcoming book, The Segregated Scholars: Black Social Scientists and the Creation of Black Labor Studies, 1890-1950, examines three generations of scholar-activists, and her biography-in-progress of lawyer and economist Sadie T. M. Alexander investigates representations of black women workers and the impact of racism and sexism on black women in male professions in the early twentieth century. This program is made possible by a program offered by the Organization of American Historians.
